

Go wild for game at food event

AN EVENING which celebrates wild game is being organised by Brockleby's - the butcher, baker and specialist retailer of Asfordby Hill, Melton Mowbray.

The Wild Game Evening on Thursday, November 6 is one of two initiatives Brockleby's is planning to mark the 2008 National Taste of Game Week.

The event is being held from 7pm to 9pm in the Alpine Restaurant, at the Grange Garden Centre, Asfordby Hill, Melton, next to Brockleby's Farm Shop.

The free event will feature talks from experts on shooting, preparing and cooking game. Malcolm Partridge, Head Keeper of the Belvoir Estate, and Danny Jimminson, proprietor and head chef of the Hammer and Pincers, Wymeswold, will be among the speakers.

Free game canapés will be served and there will be a licensed bar open. Guests will also be able to buy a selection of freshly shot game.

To pre-book your free place at the Wild Game Evening, call the shop on 01664 813200 or email ian.jalland@brocklebys.co.uk.

Throughout National Taste of Game Week, which runs from November 15 to 22, the shop will have a special three-for-two offer on Brockleby's Poacher's Pies.

The cold cutting pie, which comes in individual portion sizes, is made with locally shot venison and pheasant encased in hot water pastry.

The Wild Game Evening is being run by Brockleby's Farm Shop and is unaffected by recent announcements from the Grange Garden Centre.
